Warsaw has three telephone cables connecting it directly with Moscow. One of them is used for routine communications. The other two have special uses; they connect the offices of Jakub Berman, Boleslaw Bierut, Stanislaw Radkiewicz, and Konstantin Rokossowski directly with Moscow. One of these cables is located 300 meters from the Poniatowski Bridge in the direction of the Slasko-Dabrowski Bridge. The other cable is close to the railroad bridge (sic). These cables are often checked by technicians and officials of the MVD.
